The law for selling your vehicle is common law. You can agree the terms with the other party verbally or in writing. As a seller, you could put a sign on your car saying 'sold as seen, no warranty given or implied' and take cash from the first buyer. This would be a legal agreement. However, this could cause problems later if the buyer has a complaint and claims that you did not tell them something important. It includes warranties, details of the vehicle and the parties, payment method, transfer of ownership, and DVLA registration. This form is suitable for private sales or business-to-business sales, but not for sales by professional dealers to consumers, as they have different legal rights and may need credit arrangements. To use this form, fill in as much information as possible in advance (the template is in Word format) and print two copies. Sign both copies in front of the other party and keep one as proof of sale.
